Adaptive Smart Contracts: Our Smart contracts are programmed on DeFi protocols, a combination of existing blockchain-related technologies — such as digital assets, wallets, and auxiliary services to create a financial ecosystem capable of bypassing banks, brokers, and the other middlemen who traditionally manage and process financial services.

Smart Contracts on DeFi: Revolutionizing Traditional Financial Systems

In the dynamic world of decentralized finance (DeFi), smart contracts have emerged as a foundational building block, ushering in a new era of transparency, efficiency, and accessibility in financial transactions. At its core, DeFi aims to remove intermediaries from financial processes, and smart contracts are the tools enabling this paradigm shift.

What are Smart Contracts?

Smart contracts are self-executing contracts where the terms of the agreement or conditions are written into lines of code. They automatically execute, control, or document legally relevant events or actions according to the terms of a contract or agreement.

Smart Contracts in DeFi

When smart contracts are implemented on DeFi platforms, they bring about several transformative advantages:

- Autonomy: Smart contracts operate without intermediaries. Once they are set in motion, they execute automatically when the stipulated conditions are met, ensuring that there is minimal human intervention and thus reduced errors or manipulation.
- Transparency: All transactions on DeFi platforms are recorded on public ledgers (like the Ethereum blockchain). With smart contracts, users can see the terms and conditions upfront, fostering a higher level of trust and transparency.

- Security: Blockchain, the underlying technology of DeFi, provides robust security features. Smart contracts leverage this security, ensuring that transactions and agreements are tamper-proof.
- Cost-Efficient: By eliminating middlemen like banks or brokers, smart contracts can significantly reduce transaction fees and other associated costs.
- Speed: Traditional financial processes can sometimes be tedious and time-consuming, often requiring manual processing or multiple stages of verification. Smart contracts automate many of these processes, ensuring faster transaction times.
- Global and Inclusive: DeFi platforms, powered by smart contracts, are accessible to anyone with an internet connection. This universality ensures that financial systems become more inclusive, especially for those who have been traditionally underserved by conventional financial institutions.

INTELLIWEALTH Smart Contracts are highly programmable and are designed to automatically execute new ways to build long profitability for users and the company, based on an infinite number of variables. Hence, offers many compelling use cases, many of which are beyond the reach of conventional fiat-based financial systems.
